Parviz Hassanzadeh Primary Examiner Art Unit: 1763 Continuation of 5. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: argument was not found persuasive. Applicants assert that Oxford does not teach a method of removing a photoresist but a method of etching a metal from the surface of a substrate. Examiner argues that the admitted prior art teaches a method of removing a photoresist form the surface of a substrate and it is considered obvious to perform the method of the admitted prior art using the apparatus of Oxford for removing a photoresist rathrer than removing a metal from the surface of a substrate while monitoring and controlling changes in the etching or removing agent. In another word, it is obvious to select the removing (etching) agent in accord with the material to be removed (etched) as taught by the admitted prior art.
